

By Wm. Hamilton Osborne

Copyright © 1999 by International Trade Publications, Inc.

It was the Widow McGaffney who started it. By night the rising town of Donaldson lay in ruins—ruins black and stark and uncompromising. Donaldson was a city without a hope.

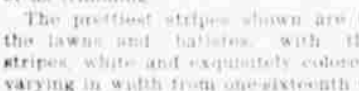

Yes, there was one home that escaped. It was Jim Cradlebaugh's

the officials of the hunt were in way interested or participant in

made of a fox, and proposing Reynard health in Yorkshire doggerel.—Lon- don Mail.

The woman whose father died gout always has something to which she may anchor her pride.

of make the required fullness. This is preferable to using the gatherer, the fullness can be adjusted exact

The woman whose father died of gout always has something to white her may anchor her pride.

Chick. Wm. Maynard Farr, farmer living five miles east of this city, claims to own the most wonderful productive cow in the United States. The animal is now supporting a family of four calves, which are a load to run with the mother in the field. The calves all were born with in the last 11 months. There are two pairs of twins, each animal perfectly formed, healthy and thriving.

and who brought me over here—a man with a big hearty smile on his face, and a big warm hand, and a big warm heart. Gents he suggested me. He made me live in comfort. But, gents, he old Terwilliger smiled in spite of himself—he was a joker—such a joker. And I didn't mind so much. But his heart—that man would give, give, give all he had for the poor, the sick, the stricken. But, gents, he was a man who would never

The old custom of honoring the kill by drinking fox flavored liquor was revived in Yorkeshire a few weeks ago. In olden days it was a common occurrence to pour a gallon of ale through the mask of a fox after it had been severed from the trunk, and for the hunters as well as the field to drink the blood colored liquor. On this occasion the officials of the hunt were in no way interested or participant in the remarkable sequence to a kill. After the huntmen had broken up the fox, a number of foot followers rescued a portion of the carcass and hurried to a little inn near at hand. There they had a huge jug filled with beer and into this they put the hams of the fox. They afterward drank the vulpine mixture, stirring their glasses with the pads of a fox, and proposing Reynard's health in Yorkshire doggerel.—London Mail.

A black and white line drawing of a woman in a 19th-century style. She is wearing a large, ornate hat with a wide brim and a high crown, decorated with floral or leaf-like patterns. Her dress is long and full, with a high collar and a long, patterned shawl or wrap draped over her shoulders and fastened at the waist. The shawl has a decorative border. The dress itself has a full skirt with a decorative hem. She is standing with her hands on her hips, looking slightly to the side.

White serge suits are tremendously popular, and no woman will regret having one in her summer wardrobe—they are exceedingly stylish and useful as well. Here is an effective model employing the new coat and, as the cut indicates, there is elaborate use of white silk soutache on skirt and coat. Worn with this is a hat of white leg-horn, adorned with huge pink roses and foliage. The edge of brim is faced with dark green silk.

When you wish to gather the sleeves of a waist or dress do not stop to adjust the gatherer to the machine, but stitch two rows of stitching around the sleeves where you wish it to be gathered, having first made the stitch large. Then pull the threads up to make the required fullness. This is preferable to using the gatherer, as the fullness can be adjusted exactly.